IG SHORTAGE FOR ADAMS.

Jounty Treasurer of Brooklyn Must Pay About $90,000.

ashler |Lawrence J. Tormey's Accounts Don't Balance.

At the office of County Treasurer Harry Adams, in Brooklyn, it was denied this morning that Cashler Lawrence J. Tormey is missing. His accounts are alleged by experts to be $24,100 short. Deputy Treasurer Harrington exhibited a latter this morning received ods and lack of management.

For the past six months two sets of experts have been at work on the County Treasurer's books. Experts for the Supervisors have discovered that between the books kept by Gardiner and Tormey, the accounts aggregate a shortage of nearly $90,000.

Mr. Adams's experts claim that while there are numerous clerical errors, there is no criminal shortage. The reports will be presented to the Board of Supervisors at the annual meeting this afternoon.

It is not believed that Deputy Gardiner toole the amount represented in his shortage. He lived alone. His home was not as good as a laborer routh a rord.

afternoon.

It is not believed that Deputy Gardiner stole the amount represented in his shortage. He lived alone. His home was not as good as a laborer profit alord. He gave liberally to charity, so liberally, in fact, he was pestered by toughs and rowdles, and had to be protected by a special policeman to and from his home. Gardiner was never known to speculate or gamble. County Treasurer Adams, it is believed, will be held responsible for the entire shortage. Mr. Adams is rich. rich.
Tormey is a well-known politician. He was once an Assemblyman. He has been in the County Treasurer's office eince 1882. One of Tormey's brothers was keeper of the City Hall, and the other one is now employed by the County Register.

There are 125 Republican members in the Legislature in joint session, and 83 are necessary to a choice. Mr. Cullom says that he feels very hopeful of securing this vote, but is not disposed to allow himself to discuss the outlook at great length. He says that at the present time ex-Representative Mason appears to be the only serious candidate, as Mr. Davis has assured him that he (Davis) is not in the race.
